

Attwaters achieves exceptional results in Sunday Times workplace survey

We recently took part in the 2026 Sunday Times Best Places to Work survey – and the results speak volumes about our commitment to our people.

The survey reflects employees' experiences across the most important areas of workplace culture, and we're delighted that Attwaters scored well above both industry and global benchmarks in a number of key areas that matter most.

A Workplace That Cares

Our team rated Attwaters significantly above the average for both law firms and global organisations in staff wellbeing. From flexible working and mental health support to a genuinely caring culture, we're committed to putting our people first – and the results speak for themselves.

Communication, trust and leadership

We received outstanding feedback for leadership visibility, open communication and shared values. Our people feel informed, supported and closely connected to our vision and purpose.

Recognition & Reward

Employees shared that they feel appreciated and recognised for their contributions, with our results reflecting a culture that values achievement, supports development and encourages growth.

How We Compared in the Survey

We exceeded benchmark scores across all six key drivers of employee experience, including reward and recognition, job satisfaction, and empowerment. Our results outperformed both legal industry peers and leading global organisations.

We're extremely proud of these results – and even more proud of the positive, inclusive and supportive culture we've created together. Thank you to our fantastic team for making Attwaters a workplace where people feel valued, supported and able to thrive.
